The past several months have been a difficult time for so many of our members, our families and our communities. Specifically, the violent deaths of George Floyd, Breonna Taylor, Ahmaud Arbery and too many others have reminded us of the deep and systemic malignancy of racism in our society. We are a part of a society where the lives of Black, Indigenous and other People of Color continue to be blighted by structural racism, lack of opportunity, health disparities and direct violence. The violence towards members of our Black community is inexcusable, and the stain of racism is shameful.

APTA-South Carolina stands with and supports those who protest these senseless murders. We join our voices with those condemning racism and violence. We share our feelings of grief and anger that so many are experiencing. We believe that Black Lives Matter.

APTA-South Carolina recognizes the value and importance of diversity and is committed to creating inclusive and equitable spaces for all. Our profession is poised to create community and to make an impact with all individuals, regardless of race, color or creed. APTA-South Carolina is committed to diversity, equity and inclusion within the profession. As an organization and members of the community as a whole, we must act now. We call our members to action to confront racism, prejudice and health disparities. We, as healers, need to dismantle racism, inequity and injustice.

The past several months have been a whirlwind for us as we have members, our families and our communities. Specifically, the violent of George Floyd, George Floyd, and the many other deaths that reminded us of the need for a more equitable and just society.
 We are a part of a society where the lives of Black people are valued less than those of white people. We are a society where people of color are often treated with less respect and dignity than their white counterparts. We are a society where the violence against Black people is often justified and the lives of Black people are often treated as less valuable than those of white people.

APTA South Carolina stands with and supports those who protect these vulnerable members. We join in our voices with those who are protesting. We share our feelings of grief and anger that so many are experiencing. We believe that Black Lives Matter.

APTA South Carolina recognizes the value and importance of diversity and inclusion in our profession. We are committed to creating a more equitable and just society for all. Our profession is committed to providing the highest quality of care to all individuals regardless of race, color or ethnicity. APTA South Carolina is committed to diversity, equity and inclusion within our profession. As an organization and members of the community as a whole, we must act now. We call our members to action to support social justice and health disparities. We believe that a more equitable and just society is the only way to create a better future for all.
